

Stranger

Don't see a stranger in his or her weakness. Time comes when destiny counts its existence with the policies of what life brings to him or her. It is just like never judging a book by its covering. Life itself begins with a threat weather good or bad. Life is a game of continuity or annuity, if you refuse to help it, you become an imaginary stature on the walls of the earth. A stranger is better known than a demon nor an angel, it is sometimes skeptical to decide who is the real identity which actually becomes an agent of good news or bad news not every stranger have a good intention to help or improve your situation. A decision can be taken by either a good intention to help or improve your situation a decision can be taken by either good or bad stranger it is just like comparing a stranger from an existing stranger a physical being of your reflection becomes a physical stranger to another personality. It is quite imaginative to distinguish between you and stranger from an extinguish between you and a stranger from an existing stranger, visitor or guest might fall in the same perfection that you might be a total stranger from an existing stranger to the other person whether positive or negative it just like a parable that say 'a stranger can become your friend' and meeting someone for the first time makes you network with others live through various social gathering. if strangers are so diplomat in their oblivion because a good stranger has good target to influence its victims by either taking advantages don't be a friend to a stranger who has an evil agenda to either victims to either notice you a drain your imagination . they play
